LUIGI L. PASINETTI was one of the leading figures in the economic theory of the late 20th and early 21st century. In his final book, he proposes a systematic formulation of his synthesis of Classical Political Economy with the contributions of Keynes and the Anglo-Italian Cambridge School of Economics. A distinctive feature of the book is the foregrounding of the theory of value as the foundational benchmark of his manifold explorations into economic theory, and the emphasis on the primacy of human labour as necessary condition of economic activity. The aim of the "Segnatura" is to assess Pasinetti's Labour Theory of Value as an expression of Pasinetti's lifelong commitment to the reconstruction of economic theory. The "Segnatura" will discuss Pasinetti's new book and ways ahead of it in the light of his appraisal of classical economic theory, of his emphasis on objective value rooted in interindustry relationships and in the vertical integration of production activities, and of his contribution to the construction of a dynamic theory of value under conditions of changing production and consumption patterns (structural economic dynamics).
